Now, it was my business as one of the prominent men controlled the company, and they swooped down on the first own and have him fined before the show roosed to Camargo. But I didn't. A lot of old pals of mine in the circus business and often told me how they got the worst of the Mexicans, and as I had along with me in my gang about the toughest bunch of fifty and odd rough and tumblers that ever hit up a dirt road, and as, besides, I felt that this tentman had a pretty good grievance, I just chewed a straw and walked away when he handed me this talk about the way the greasers had put it over him. "The last act of the concert following the show was about over, and the greaters were leaving their seats, when my sufet tentman deliberately hopped on top of the pile of stakes he had fixed and gave the 'Hey Rube' yelp—gave it like that Bull o' Bashan they tell about. He had put the whole gang of hands next, for they didn't waste a second in taking up the yell all over the tent. Then they came a-rushing for the poles.

"Well, I thought I'd keep out of that one, I made for the shelter of the ticket wagon and saw it all from there.

I'm telling it. The quiet tentman looked like a devil up in front of the melec. In a spirit of utter defiance he quickly dropped his pole and began to use his fists. He was a six-footer, and built in proportion, and the way they went down was a warning to garter snakes.

"Finally his eye lit upon the prison guard who had beat him when he was chained in the dungeon, and by a curious coincidence the greaser who had tried to stab him heaved in sight.

Howard got away all right, too, for I took occasion myself to sago, over in Camargo, 'he sald. 'Don't know why; I had never seen the gopner before. I was too speedy for him and planted a ball in his shoulder. Then about a hundred of his pals hopped me and they came near kicking me inside out. That's what alled my head when I joined the show.

Kentucky Judge Set a Monetary Value on the Privilege.

Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune,) The late Judge S. Holbrook of Lewis | co county, Ky., was a man of great learning and great passions. He was a man of the broadest benevolence and the narrowest prejudices. While one of the kindest men that ever lived, if you took him by the right handle, he was, at the same time, as irritable and vindictive as a copperhead when pro-voked. His eccentricities were innumerable and as original as plenteous.

Despised Commoner Passed the Palacce of local political prominence is to allow him to call him "nigger" for one month without taking any offense. He boarded at the hotel where the colored man was porter, and during the month he contrived to call him "nigger" low the system of the pludge was on a "periodical" during that month.

"I want to call you plain 'nigger,' sur, "said the judge, in making the contract, "There is to be no 'colored man' about you. The appellation of darky' is to be unknown to you for one month. To call you or object being what you are to be as innocent of the term 'negro' as a Circassian babe. You are to be 'nigger,' suh, 'nigger,' what you always shall be. To call you colored man, 'darky' or 'negro' looks like an attempt to take you out of your black hide and apologize to you for your being what you are. I like you, understand, and don't want to hurt your feelings, but I'm just dying to call you 'nigger,' and I am willing to call you 'nigger,' a

The old judge was a great friend of the late James Robb, circuit clerk for forty years, but now and then he'd set mad at the latter for some fancied wrong and would call around and give Robb a good "cussin." The latter would make no angry response, feeling that if Holbrook could get any catisfaction out of it, he was welcome to it. But at last, the worm, not feeling very well, turned. Robb was digsing holes and putting in posts for a fence one day, when the old judge called around to administer the periodical "cussin." For a long time Robb.
